Signed _____ Date _____

A photograph of a modern hospital reception area. In the foreground, a long, light-colored wooden reception desk is visible. Two staff members in maroon scrubs are seated behind the desk, working on computers. On the desk, there are several potted plants, including a large arrangement of white and yellow flowers in a glass vase, and a smaller potted plant with white orchids. A red text box is overlaid on the right side of the image, containing the text "What is your operation for?". In the background, a patient in light blue jeans is standing and talking to a staff member. The walls are light-colored, and there are informational posters on the wall. The floor is a light-colored tile.

A photograph of a patient lying in a hospital bed, covered by a white sheet. A red speech bubble with white text is overlaid on the right side of the image. In the background, a vase with colorful flowers is visible on a table near a window with blinds.

What is your operation for?

A photograph of several nurses in a hospital setting. In the foreground, a nurse with dark hair in a bun, wearing a dark blue scrub top, is looking down at a piece of paper she is holding. Behind her, another nurse is partially visible. To the right, a male nurse in a light blue scrub top is looking towards the left. In the background, other staff members are blurred. A red speech bubble with white text is overlaid on the right side of the image.

Workflows – pre WW2

Workflows – Post WW2

Workflows of the future – AI

Just Another
Workflow

The noble notion

“Workflows liberate scientists from the drudgery of routine data processing so they can concentrate on scientific discovery.”*

The practical notion

1. That the process is replicable
2. Ensuring that people get trained more quickly
3. Ensuring that there is quality control in the process

So to Ebola, the United States
And workflows

Thomas Eric Duncan (dec)

Due to an oversight in how the physicians and nurses workflow portion was designed in the EHR, however, the vital travel history entered into the EHR by the nurse did not appear in the physician's standard workflow

In an Oct. 2 statement, Texas Health officials said that in the "interest of transparency," they confirmed the chain of events leading up to Duncan's travel history not being initially known by or communicated to physicians

1. Get feedback on workflows
And improve them

“Frustration with electronic health records has never been higher among RNs, with vast majorities complaining of poor workflows, bad communication and scant input on implementation decisions, a new survey shows.”

- 90 percent say their EHR has adversely affected communications between nurses and their patients.
- 67 percent of nurses say they've been taught workarounds in flawed EHRs to allow other health team members to view pertinent patient information
- 69 percent of nurses in for-profit hospitals say their IT department is "incompetent"

<http://blackbookmarketresearch.com/>
- as quoted from IT Healthcare news

“Although they're on the front lines of care delivery, and the most frequent users of EHRs, an overwhelming 98 percent of the 13,650 licensed RNs polled by Black Book for its latest EHR Loyalty Poll say they've never been included in their hospitals' IT decisions or design.”

2. Make Workflows Customizable

“Possibly relevant to the Ebola vs. EHR case in Dallas, workflows can be created and customized by physicians, who know their workflows best.”

discretion to look beyond the workflow

Simple geo aware workflows like

- a) Been to geographical region = what do you need to know in terms of WHO information about that region
- b) Notify someone more senior based on their role and location relevant to the data input
- c) Activate a report, with detail filled in to expedite the distribution of the workflow
- d) Tracking personnel with permission
