The New Soldier

Track: Defense and Intelligence

Author(s): Eric Thijs, Aart Den Ouden

It's all about information. This is also the case for modern warfare; the side that can collect and manage the data in real time will obtain the upper hand in today's conflicts. With the presentation we build the picture of the "New Soldier," who is actually supported in his decisions with all the information concerning terrain, condition of roads and bridges, enemy strength and positions, and their influence on operations.

Data collection, retrieval and analyses, from reconnaissance units up to the command center, with GIS applications and voice activation are main points in delivering the advantage needed to be successful.
